Great Places to Teach, Learn, and Grow

When you work with SupplySource Education Interiors, you have everyone and everything you need: to envision and design your interior space; to plan work flow and work areas that help you do your best; to create healthy, sustainable environments that make your institution successful.

Since 1984 we have been creating environments that empower:

- ▶ Empowering your people to work better, smarter, safer, and happier.
- ▶ Empowering your technology to serve you as it ought to do, by integrating it into all aspects of the design and installation.
- ▶ Empowering your budget, by using our skills and experience at contract management to get you the best possible pricing and value.
- ▶ Empowering your organization, by helping you get what you want and manage what you have.

Your vision, our mission: to provide educational spaces that welcome people each day and send them home again satisfied with time well spent. Serve the people at the heart of your institution with flexible space design and furniture that addresses their specific functions and needs...by giving them good ergonomics...by creating great places to meet and interact for breaks, creative collaboration, and rejuvenation.

SupplySource Education Interiors is your single source for interior design, furniture specification, project management, contract management, and installation.

We have the stability and long-term industry presence to help you manage your image while you manage your facilities, fulfilling your project needs now and years from now with continuity.

You benefit from our purchasing impact. (SupplySource is the largest contract interiors firm in Pennsylvania.) Through our contract experience and full-time contract managers, we negotiate the most favorable pricing for you. We belong to many purchasing groups and alliances, are a certified Herman Miller dealer, and offer furnishings and accessories from hundreds of manufacturers.

Your SupplySource project manager meets regularly with your contractor, coordinating schedules to get the job done – on time.

We employ full-time installers trained to handle everything we supply. In today's security-conscious world, this is too important to contract out to untrained laborers.

Because the elements of your education interior constitute a business asset, we stay on the job with you to honor any needs under the warranty and make sure all pieces are performing. If you have a furniture standards program, we can give you price advantages and consistency, with tools like e-commerce to make it easier.

Whether it's a single chair or a long-term contract relationship, SupplySource values your business and strives to exceed your expectations.

Classrooms, Lecture Halls & Training Areas

Stimulating Spaces

Learning spaces need to stimulate thinking. They can be loud or quiet, crowded or sparse. They are effective as long as they stimulate, motivate, and keep people thinking. The very arrangement of a learning space sets expectations of the activity that will occur there. Stimulating environments draw us in. They are the places where we want to be.

Student Areas, Lounges & Common Areas

Social Spaces

People are social creatures, and learning is a social activity that happens in many places beyond traditional classrooms. Campuses today reflect this more and more. Community areas mingled among classrooms and lecture halls, small cafés spread throughout campus, and lounge areas in libraries support the social nature of learning.

Conference & Collaboration Rooms

Adaptable Spaces

The demands placed on learning spaces evolve along with methods of teaching and styles of learning. These spaces must keep pace with the multi-tasking nature and habits of students. Classrooms serve more than one purpose. They fit large or small groups and support quiet work or teamwork. Flexible furniture makes it easy to change things around for whatever the latest use requires. Today it may be the kick-off meeting for a psych project, tomorrow it may be a department luncheon.

Cafés, Dining Halls & Break-Out Areas

Healthful Spaces

Cafés are hubs of activity; they are not just for eating anymore. The places need to support multi-tasking – as in eating and studying or eating and socializing. Such spaces can be designed to provide an energized environment for socializing or to create a quieter atmosphere for last-minute studying. Both types of places should provide a creative spirit and vibe to draw students to these places.

Libraries & Study Areas

Engaging Spaces

Engaging spaces spark numerous opportunities for learning and discovery to occur. Private study areas and collaboration tables help free the mind to accomplish great things, while giving room to work.

Libraries and study areas are one of the few places where students are given the chance to "get away from it all" and be free from daily distractions. If the environment allows students to learn easily, they will return often.

Administration, Faculty & Staff Offices

Resourceful Spaces

Offices may run from lavish to super-efficient, but every office should welcome students with a private and comfortable place to sit and talk. The relationships formed between student and professor significantly enrich the educational experience.

Environments that Empower

Environmental Awareness

As a certified Herman Miller dealer, we represent perhaps the most progressive, environmentally conscious furniture manufacturer in the world. Whenever possible we offer products that contain recycled materials. We continue working toward more sustainable practices in our own operations and help our customers by supporting their efforts to recycle furnishings when they are ready to upgrade or replace items. SupplySource Education Interiors understands and can help with design, recommendations, and documentation for LEED scoring and other programs, such as Greenguard, that certify your own environmental efforts.
